Biogen Stakeholder Privacy Notice

Date: 1 August 2026

This notice describes how Biogen Canada Inc. ("Biogen") collects and processes your personal information as a payer, government official, civil servant, employee of a patient organisation or insurance company, or any other party with whom Biogen interacts on a regular basis and who is not a patient or healthcare professional (a "Stakeholder").

What personal information does Biogen collect and use?

Biogen will collect and use the following personal information about you:

(i) your contact details, such as your name, title, postal address, e-mail address, fax number and landline & mobile telephone numbers;

(ii) professional information about you, including employment history, academic background, field of expertise and specialisation, publications and public speeches and interest in Biogen products; and

(iii) information regarding interactions between Biogen and yourself, such as accounts of conversations and exchanges of correspondence.

Biogen collects most of this information directly from you through interactions with Biogen, but also from publicly available sources (e.g. the internet) and from industry databases that contain details about Stakeholders (e.g. professional databases).

Why does Biogen collect and use my personal information?

Biogen collects and uses your personal information to maintain and enhance Biogen's business relationship with you and build a profile about you in order to understand better your areas of expertise and topics of interest.

With whom does Biogen share my personal information?

Biogen shares your personal information with other third parties. We may disclose personal information to our group companies for the purposes described in this notice. Biogen may use third parties to provide services to us which may require disclosure of your personal information to such third parties. These include service providers which assist Biogen with our data processing activities, e.g. by providing cloud technology and data storage facilities. Such transfers may include transfers outside Canada or your province to countries which do not implement an adequate level of protection for your personal information under federal or provincial data protection law. In such cases, Biogen takes appropriate steps to ensure your personal information is processed in accordance with provincial and federal data privacy laws.

Biogen may collect, use and disclose your personal information to third parties where it considers this necessary for compliance with applicable laws, to protect the vital interests of any person, or where necessary to exercise, establish or defend Biogen's legal rights. If a third party acquires all or a material part of Biogen's business or assets, then your personal information may be disclosed in connection with that sale.

Biogen retains your personal information for no longer than is necessary for the purposes for which it has been collected and in accordance with any specific retention periods required by law.

What are my rights?

Stakeholders may have the following rights under provincial and federal data privacy laws, where applicable:

- right to access their personal information
- right to rectification of incorrect personal information
- right to data portability.
- right to de-indexation/cessation of dissemination

- right to information about automated decision-making

Where Biogen processes your personal information on the basis of consent, you may withdraw your consent at any time without any prejudice by contacting us using the contact details below or, in the case of an e-mail, by clicking the unsubscribe function within the e-mail.

Please note that some of these rights are limited by applicable data protection law and we have the right to collect, process and hold your personal information to perform our legal obligations. We may require you to provide additional information necessary to confirm their identity before we comply with any request made.

Contact information

If you have questions or concerns about this notice or the processing of your personal information or would like to exercise your rights as outlined above, you should contact your usual Biogen contact. You may also contact Biogen's Data Privacy Officer by e-mailing privacy@biogen.com.